

Oakway Symphony winners selected

Chosen from a field of more than 40 performers, Sue Synnstedt, 16-year-old violinist from Royal Oak, took top honors in the Oakway Symphony Orchestra Young Artist competition. She received $1,000 and the opportunity to be featured in a performance with the symphony at Oakway's final concert of the '78-79 season, May 19, 8 p.m. at Madonna College, Schoolcraft at Levan, Livonia.

Kirk Toth, a 24-year-old violinist from Redford, and Alan Ongtengco, Bloomfield Hills, 17-year-old violinist, each received $750 for second and third positions in the competition.

They, as will Paul Wingert, 22-year-old cellist from Ann Arbor who received $500, perform with the symphony at the Young Artist Concert.

The $3,000 in awards were made possible by a Michigan Foundation for the Arts grant and through the support of the Oakway orchestra.

The final competition, April 13, 14, was judged by a panel of musicians from local universities: Glenda Kirkland, Alfio Pignotti and Robert Quayle, all faculty of Eastern Michigan University; James Tamburini of Windsor; and Falvio Varani, artist in residence, Oakland University.

Sue Synnstedt has appeared with the Eastern York Symphony in Toronto and with the International, Detroit and Oakway symphonies.

In February she finished third in the Stuberger String Auditions. A student on scholarship at the Cleveland Institute of Music, she studies with David Cerone.

Kirk Toth began his studies of the violin at 7. He has studied with Aron Zeronian, Misha Mishakoff, Michael Avsharian and Paul Mankowitzki at the University of Michigan. A member of the Virginia Symphonia and the Rochester Philharmonic of New York, he is a graduate student at the University of Michigan.

Alan Ongtengco began piano at 6 and has won a number of scholarships to Interlochen first prize in the annual Piano Technician Guild Scholarship competition, first prize in the 1979 Traub music awards in both violin and piano, and achieved a perfect score in the State Solo and Ensemble Festival.

Popular band

The Farmington Community Band joins Greenfield Village's Country Fair Weekend festivities Sunday, May 20. Dixieland will be the order of the day as they stroll through the village, then stop for a full concert at 4:30 p.m. The musicians will ride a float in the city's Memorial Day parade; then prepare for a Father's Day concert June 17 in Oakland Community College's amphitheater.
