

NOW DO MY WORK WITH EASE

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored My Health

Hornell, N. Y.—"I was in bad health but there didn't seem to be any one thing the matter with me. I was tired out all over and it was an effort for me to move. I was irritable and could not sleep nights and had trouble with my bowels and at my periods. It seemed that nearly everyone around me knew of your medicine and wanted me to try it. So at last I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and Lydia E. Pinkham's Fruit Medicine and improved every day. I do all my work now except the washing and do it with ease. I can accomplish as much in a day now as it would have taken me a week to do of old. I am so glad to tell you this. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial if you like."—Mrs. CHAS. BAKER, 21 Spencer Ave., Hornell, N. Y.

In almost every neighborhood there are women who know the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They know because they have taken it and have been helped. Why don't you give it a trial?

The exorbitant prices that prevail all over the world led Col. Charles I. Forster, director of the Veterans' Bureau to say at a reception in Washington:

"These unreasonable prices naturally made men think that post-war morality in the business world is more rapacious than pre-war morality. I am glad to say that a man was content to hold his own. Today he insists on holding other people's."

Lansing—Stories of "hazing" in Lansing high school fraternities has caused Thomas E. Johnson, state superintendent of public instruction, to issue a reprimand and warning to school authorities who allow "frats" to flourish unmolested. Stories of activities of "frats" in the local schools have reached the state superintendent. He brands high school fraternities as detrimental to the moral and a hindrance to public school education.

Dowagiac—Twenty-three creditors of the defunct Farmers & Merchants bank at Jones, who have $3,000 in Liberty and Victory bonds to their credit, must go into the Federal court with the plea they are preferred creditors. Referee Willard Banyon, has decided they are like any other creditor, and that they share with those who deposited currency. Hearing has developed that the Jones bank accepted the bonds with the guarantee the would pay the interest of the issue. Because of that, the depositors believe they were preferred creditors.

OLD BOAT NOW POWER PLANT

Former Mississippi River Steamer Seems to Have by No Means Outlived its Usefulness.

One of the survivors of the days made famous by Mark Twain's "Life on the Mississippi," the steamboat Andrew Padlock, is now serving as a power plant at New Orleans. Perched high in the air on stilts, smoke still belches forth in black masses from its tall stacks, but the stern wheel that once churned the murky waters of the river is motionless.

The captain and crew of the "Andy," as it was affectionately termed by the negro roustabouts, were transferred to other boats, and the crew now consists of two firemen, each of whom is addressed jocularly as "captain." The numerous passing craft invariably slow their steers in salute, and old "Andy" always replies vigorously from his position just beyond the water's edge.

Success. The Sunday school teacher was doing his best to inculcate lessons of altruism, and had taken as his example the case of the little boy, one of whom was always ready to grab, while the second was willing to share everything.

"Now, children," he inquired impressively, "which of these two boys will grow up into the successful and respected man?"

And as one voice the class answered:

"The boy that gives!"—American Legion Weekly.

The family were discussing what kind of dresses they would wear at a fancy dress ball to which they were going.

Andrew made the suggestion that they should all wear dresses to match the color of their hair.

"In that case," she declared, "I should wear an autumn-dressed dress; Cynthia would have to wear a zodiac dress; mamma a gray one; and daddy—oh, daddy! What color can you wear, because you—"

"I shouldn't be able to tell at all if you make that stipulation," interrupted father hurriedly.

The Noble Deed. "Willie," said the mother, "your clothes are wet. You have been in the water again."

"Yes, mother," said Willie, bravely. "I went in to save that dog."

"My noble darling!" said his mother. "Did you jump in to save him?"

"No, mother," replied Willie, "I jumped in first so as to be there when he fell in."

The Truth. "You can't reason with a woman."

"No, my boy, women are hard to fool."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

One consideration that checks weak-kneed revolutions is that people have to die in revolutions.

William found a pocketbook

But the string jerked it back

It looked like a happy discovery as it lay there on the sidewalk—until the discoverer reached to pick it up. Then the hidden string jerked it away. All William got was disappointment.

That's the way a good many people have found it to be with the comfort and cheer they thought they had secured in tea and coffee. When they came to depend on it—there was a hidden string, and nothing left but disappointment.

The drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee, is a nerve stimulant. Constant stimulation of the nerves often produces rebellion that takes the form of sleeplessness, headaches, irritability, high blood pressure. That's the string to tea and coffee.

"Full House" Likely to Be the Least That Father of Quaintest Word Remark.

A social worker attending the convention in Indianapolis of the Indiana Tuberculosis association told this one:

A Sunday school teacher had been asked by one of her pupils what word was used in referring to two children born at the same time.

"Twins," the teacher answered.

"What is the term used in referring to three babies born at the same time?" was the next inquiry.

"They are triplets," she replied.

"How do you refer to four babies?" another asked.

"Four babies are called quadruplets."

A bright, flaxen-haired youth, probably thinking to catch the teacher, asked the term for five children.

Before the teacher had time to respond, a red-headed little fellow, the Peck's big boy of the class, answered:

"Gee, that's a full house."—Indianapolis News.

Don't think for a minute that man wants but little here below.

Honesty is always the best policy for the grower in general.

There is no such thing as being too unselfish, but very few of us are so danger of falling into the excess.

Paris Newspapers Would Like to Know More of the Wondrous "Land Where Nobody Dies."

In truth, they do die there, but not until they are very old. The country is Madagascar, or, more exactly, Antanarivo, the capital, situated in the middle of the island, on a rock crowing a small plain belonging to the plateau of Inerina. According to Dr. Estrade, the colonial physician—and there is no reason for not believing him—the birth rate at Antanarivo is extremely high and the mortality is surprisingly low.

These Madagascars are a happy people. "But could we not," asks the Paris Figaro, "get from them their two wonderful secrets: That of the numerous births and that of longevity? They would render us greater services than all the laws on depopulation and the bounties and other encouragements which the state gives to the parents of large families."

Don't be afraid to ask questions. That's the only way you can find out a good many things.

There is such a thing as being too unselfish, but very few of us are so danger of falling into the excess.
