Look Out For Rover.

Prosecutor Blakeslee advises the county board of supervisors to add a dog warden to the list of county employees. The warden would be expected to collect the dog licenses in the county or to shoot the dog on which the license had not been paid. Collection of a dog tax under a law of 1919, which took it out of the hands of the local authorities, has been a problem that has bothered every supervisor and the sheriff, and treasurer upon whom devolves responsibility for making the collection. The assessing officer in each township is supposed to make a list of the dog owners in his township and to report it to the sheriff.
