

Orchard Lake widening set

By STEVE BARNABY
Farmington Editor

Despite resident protest, Orchard Lake Road, between 10 Mile and the I-696 expressway, will be widened to five lanes.

That was the word from the Farmington Hills City Council this week as it reaffirmed an earlier council decision to help pay for the program.

Last November, the council had agreed to reconsider the program.

But money was the final arbiter in swaying council sentiment.

"We must face the fact that the federal funds can't be shifted," said Councilwoman Joann Soronen.

She was responding to a comment by Councilman Joe Alkateeb that 12 Mile was more in need of expansion than was Orchard Lake Road.

The project will cost $746,000. The city will pay $100,000. She also said the Orchard Lake Road section south of 10

Mile in the city of Farmington was in critical need of widening. Orchard Lake Road, the main north-south artery through the community, recently was widened between I-696 and 15 Mile in West Bloomfield.

"IT'S NOT GOOD planning to widen a road, narrow it and then widen it again," she told her council colleagues.

More than 450 residents surrounding the two-mile stretch had signed petitions protesting the widening program.

Residents fear an increase in traffic and development of commercial business in that area. Protesters wish to maintain what they believe to be a rural atmosphere.

Orchard Lake Road in that area now handles 18,000 cars a day, according to the Oakland County Road Commission.

The council unanimously agreed to continue its support of widening.
