

Anti-nuke activist performs for benefit

Charlie King, composer of 'Acres of Clams' which is becoming the theme song of the anti-nuke movement, will perform at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 10, in Birmingham Unitarian Church, 651 Woodward Avenue. His performance is co-sponsored by Detroit Safe Energy Coalition and Upland Hills Ecological Awareness Center.

Donation is $4 at the door, or $1 for seniors and students.

More people know his music than know him as a performer. His music has been sung and recorded by Pete Seeger, Barbara Dane, Arlo Guthrie and Harry Chapin.

Even so, he describes himself more as a story-teller than a musician, and since the songs he writes, collects and sings each have a story to tell.

He writes and sings of hoboes and presidents, of a quiet old lady embezzler, or the man in the basement who watches the boiler "secretly dancing the day shift away."

Of his work he says, "I try to perform popular music that suggests that people's lives really matter, not just an occasional nuisance, but the stuff we all do when we are on our feet and moving."
