February is history month

February is American History Month, and the Daughters of the American Revolution encourage citizens to share in their observance of this month. The last battle of the American Revolution was fought at Yorktown, Va. in 1781. Lord Cornwallis was forced to surrender the British troops under his command. After the articles of surrender were signed by both armies, a series of camp dinners were held at which the distinguished English prisoners were guests. Men who had very recently fought each other on the battlefield were now sharing a meal across the table.
