

Fire chief resigns

 Johnson has made a number of recommendations which he felt would improve fire coverage in the city, many of which some volunteers feel would have diminished the volunteers' clout — hiring more fulltimers and extending service to 24 hours.
 Presently, stations are manned by fulltime firefighters from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

 He noted that in 1974 a study was made by the Insurance Service Organization which concluded that one of Farmington Hills' largest problems was its lack of fulltime firefighters. That same condition, said Johnson, exists today.

 She managed to elude him by hiding behind a tree.
 She said she last saw him driving west on Shiawassee.
