

Viewpoint: Silk Organza From Albert Capraro. Reality Born Of Illusion.

If you believe that a fabric as sheer and precious as silk organza could lift you up into a fantasy of delight...if you believe that a color could be so fragile that it would, if dropped, shatter into a thousand pieces...then, you believe in the spirit of evening dressing as Albert Capraro envisions it. But where does the reality end and the imagination take over?

Slip into one of the organza separates you see here and find out. Left: the pleated Pierrot-collared blouse, adorned with more pleats that run down the sleeves and burst into a pouf at the wrist, $198. Right: the ruffle-collared blouse, $196. And the skirt for both, sparked by the simplicity of one big bow, $178. All in pale violet or pink, for sizes 4 to 12.
