roll call report

WASHINGTON: Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes May 14-20.

HOUSE

A FEDERAL COMMISSION: By a vote of 165 for and 231 against, the House defeated a bill keeping the National Historical Publications and Records Commission alive for the next two fiscal years on a budget of $3 million annually. The 37-year-old panel makes grants to state and local agencies and nonprofit groups for preserving records and issuing historical publications.

Supporter Jack Brooks, D-Tex., said "they lose this kind of money through the cracks in the Pentagon every day."

Opponent John Rousselot, R-Calif., said private sources should be able to fund the commission's work. He asked: "Why is it necessary to take this out of the federal Treasury?"

Members voting "yes" wanted public funding to keep the commission in existence during fiscal years 1982 and 1983.

Reps. Carl Pursell, R-Ply., David Bonior, D-Mt. Clemens, William Ford, D-Taylor, and William Broadhead, D-Detroit, voted "yes."

Reps. James Blanchard, D-Pleas. Ridge, and William Broomfield, R-Birmingham, voted "no."

JUNKYARD DOGS: The House passed, 334 for and 65 against, and sent to the Senate a bill creating the office of inspector general at Defense, Justice and Treasury and the Agency for International Development. This would bring to 20 the number of inspectors general, whose job is to probe fraud and waste within their agencies.

The bill was passed under a short-cut parliamentary rule, and some opponents objected to this procedure, rather than the substance of the measure.

Supporter Jack Brooks, D-Tex., said of the Pentagon: "With a budget estimated at $1.65 trillion over the next five years, it has no one person with clear responsibility for coordinating the work of the 18,000 auditors and investigators functioning in scattered offices throughout the department."

Opponent Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., said the bill was opposed by the Pentagon because the Secretary of Defense "cannot direct or control (the inspector general) within his department, or even keep him out of highly classified contingency planning matters."

Members voting "yes" wanted four more inspectors general in the executive branch.

Pursell, Bonior, Ford, Broadhead, Blanchard, and Broomfield voted "yes."

FY 82 BUDGET: By a vote of 244 for and 155 against, the House gave final congressional approval to the conference report on the fiscal 1982 budget resolution. The measure will guide the House and Senate in votes on spending bills. It limits outlays at $695.45 billion, anticipates revenues of $557.8 billion, and projects a deficit of $37.65 billion.

Supporter Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, said "I urge this body to approve this... then get on with the next important job... namely that of bringing federal spending under control."

Opponent Ron Paul, R-Tex., said the budget plan is too extravagant, because his arithmetic shows that after 1982 the national debt will be pushed "to the astronomical figure" of about $1.1 trillion.

Members voting "yes" favored the fiscal 1982 budget blueprint, which is supported by the Reagan administration.

Pursell and Broomfield voted "yes."
Bonior, Ford, Broadhead and Blanchard voted "no."

SENATE

DEFENSE CUT: By a vote of 66 for and 29 against, the Senate killed an amendment cutting $200 million from the Pentagon's fiscal 1982 allocation for operations and maintenance. Proponents of the amendment said the money could be trimmed from operations such as janitorial services, photography and record-keeping, but opponents said the military would have to reduce combat readiness.

The amendment was offered to a defense procurement bill later passed and sent to the House. Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., who favored killing the amendment, said "these are the very innards, the very wheels, the nuts and bolts that make the program move."

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., sponsor of the amendment, said that were it adopted "we would not be hurting our military preparedness one iota."

Senators voting "yes" opposed the spending cut. Sen. Carl Levin, D, voted "no."
Sen. Donald Riegle, D, did not vote.

FOREST CHIEF: The Senate confirmed, 72 for and 25 against, President Reagan's nomination of John B. Crowell Jr. of Oregon as assistant secretary of Agriculture for Natural Resources and Environment.
