

Students learn art is a matter of self-expression

This model of an owl is a favorite of students who learn painting techniques from Farmington-area artist Edde Joppich. The students at William Grace named the critter Yahrtzee for the day.

Children listen intently as Farmington artist Edde Joppich explaining the many ways to express yourself on canvas. The students follow the demonstration with opportunities to use similar techniques and materials in their own art classes over the next few weeks.
