

LIT adding classes about the fine arts

Next fall, for the first time, fine arts will be added to the architecture and interior architecture classes offered to students in the Lawrence Institute of Technology's School of Architecture's pre-college program.

High school juniors and seniors will be offered a chance to attend college level classes in either art or architecture on Saturdays from Sept. 26 through Jan. 30.

A program for interior architecture will be offered during the spring pre-college term Feb. 6 through June 5, 1981.

Students can choose from classes in drawing and composition or basic design, as well as a seminar in art and architecture which will include field trips to museums, galleries, and the Frank Lloyd Wright-designed "Affleck House".

Enrollment is open for one, any two, or all three classes. Cost for each class — fine arts and basic design — is $40. The art/architecture seminar tuition is $50.

LIT officials also estimate that materials for a full program could cost an additional $100.

An LIT spokesman said the pre-college program is designed to give talented and motivated high school students the chance to advance their interests and abilities and to help them discover their own aptitude for studying fine arts or architecture at the college level.

Admission is limited to those high school juniors and seniors with a B average who otherwise meet the standards of admission to LIT, which is a private school located in Southfield.

College credit toward a bachelor of science degree in architecture or interior architecture will be awarded students who finish the course with a grade of C or better.

Deadline for admission to the program is Sept. 23. For more information about the program call 356-0200, ext.
