Computers limited in analyzing scroll

Dear Lorene,

I am right handed, youngish 53. Aren't we all?
As you can see, I am interested in graphology.
I am enclosing two cards from two different computers. Some comments from both computers are similar.
Do you agree with this modern day version of what my handwriting reveals?

N.R. — Livonia

Dear N. R.,

Thanks for sending me the computer handwriting analysis cards. I was extremely interested to compare them to the analysis I have made and I do find several similarities.
I'm certain you noted that the computer analysis is basically a listing of traits. I do not wish to knock computers, because I realize we are rapidly moving into a computer age. I also know they can do absolutely amazing things. However, when it comes to assessing a person's personality I have some reservations.
You are an outer-directed person.

You like people and become emotionally and interpersonally involved with others. However, you tend always to put a little distance between you and other people. You respect other people's privacy and expect the same consideration in return. It appears you have experienced some past hurts in this area. (right slant, word, line and left margin spacing)

You are an observant person, also quite discerning. You are able to plan ahead and to organize. When you assume a responsibility you are conscientious about it. You like to put forth your best effort. You are aware of the exercise care in the handling of all aspects. However, you sometimes experience difficulty sticking with the job until completion. It seems your interest and enthusiasm are there at the beginning but a loss of energy and or interest can render the task formidable. This in turn causes tension for you.

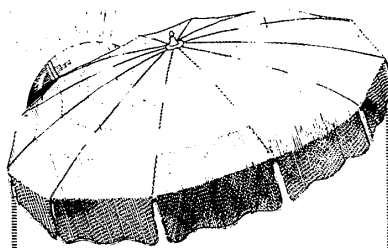

You seem to have periods of emotional highs and lows, even though you do work at controlling them. How other people perceive you seems very important to you. This causes you to behave in such a manner as to always be considered proper by your social set. You are basically a traditional person with strong loyalties to friends and values. However, there also appears to be an air of independence about you. You choose to do your own thinking and can be a bit opinionated at times. Your mind follows a very logical pattern.

With your good sense of humor and the feminine charm I also see in this handwriting. I sense that you can be a very fun person to be with. You enjoy laughter and can even laugh at yourself.
Whatever the surname in your signature represents you seem to look up to it. There is a certain humility in the handwriting. You do not have a big ego that needs constant "stroking."
