

Youngster Might Be Right, But What's His Name?

Suzanne Bloch lauds the concern of the younger generation with what is going on around them, and isn't sure what name to call her "ex-hippy" son.

Mrs. Bloch, talentist and Elizabethan music authority who appeared in concert here with the Plymouth Symphony and presented another concert at Schoolcraft Community, is a youthful-looking mother who enjoys talking about young people.

Miss Bloch is also Mrs.

Smith. Her husband, Paul, teaches mathematics at Columbia University.

"WHEN I CAME to America in 1925, the younger generation was swallowing goldfish. Prohibition was on, and they were drinking bathtub gin. They had no interest in the state of the world," said Miss Bloch.

"Today it is fantastic to see the young people giving up their time to picket on behalf of California grape-pickers, or to see students at Columbia collecting funds for Biafra," she said.

Miss Bloch pointed out, however, that some do go to extremes, such as the SDS, and made it clear that she does not sympathize with students who take drugs.

Her confusion about her son's name arises from his interest in the out-of-doors. An ex-hippy at Haight-Ashbury, he is officially Anthony, but now prefers to call himself Foster.

She is afraid now that he may be on the way to joining "the Establishment." With a group of friends, he is opening an art colony in San Francisco.

co. supported by sales of a health bread he developed. Sales are going so well they've had to buy a truck to make deliveries.

Her older son, Matthew, is an art student.
