Ellis to teach at Lawrence Tech

Robert W. Ellis of Farmington Hills has been named to the faculty at Lawrence Institute of Technology as a lecturer in the School of Engineering. A graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Ellis holds a B.S. in metallurgical engineering, an M.C. in engineering, and a Ph. D. The former chief academic and operating officer at Detroit Institute of Technology, Ellis currently employed as a mechanical engineer at the U.S. Army Tank and Automotive Research Center. He has also taught at Florida International University and the University of South Florida.

Ellis will be teaching in the mechanical engineering program at LIT.

One of the first

Owners of the Farmington Merle Norman's got together with other corporate executives recently to recall the days of the Merle Norman "Star," which was the first product delivery car used by the cosmetics company and is now housed at the company's treasure house in Sylmar, Calif. Those at the celebration were Lorie Moore (left), Helvi Kolvunen, Lew Moore, Eric Kolvunen, Dorothy Nethercutt and JB Nethercutt, chairman of the board.
