Note 1039 (5704, 1937) and the journalistic heritage of her maternal grand-parents. She made it before deadline. So this first-time grandmother is able to report without delay the birth of Katherine Anna Stanizsewski in Providence Hospital late in the eve-mine of Tuesday. Sept. 8.

Providence Hospital late in the eve-ning of Tuesday, Sept. 8. The most exciting of the New Voic-es I've yet reported is the daughter of Barbara and Gary Staniszewski of Livonia and granddaughter of Helen and Stanley Staniszewski of Sterling Heights and Margaret and Joe Miller of Novi. AT THIS WRITING we know he weight is 7 pounds 14 ounces and there's a little bit of hair that probaby is brown rather than blond. Her dad says maybe she has green eyes like her mother's. I've told him I doubt that, though she might later.

And everybody is doing just fine.

THE MIDNIGHT telephone call were received and the ones we made with great dispatch to sisters in Boston, East Lansing and Washington came after a weekend of activity appropri-ate to Labor Day. At one point in the slow progress I stopped by the not-yet parent's home, and shortly after that the infrequent contractions stopped. I wondered if a visit by a grandmother with a slow-od-eluver history had been a jinx. On Sunday alternoon, when we had

Ozker, Sharp, Nichols named grant honorees

Doreen Ozker, Dinghy Sharp and Al-ice Nichols have been selected as the named grant honorees by Farmington Branch American Association of University Women (AAUW).

The designation is given each year honoring members by donating part of the scholarship funds the AAUW dis-burses every year in their names.

Mrs. Nichols is a Farmington artist with a long background in promoting the arts. Currently she offers art cours-es at Oakland Community College. Among her many awards, she was se-lected winner of the Oakland County Cultural Council's logo design contest.

At any rate, we can hardly wait to meet her. Oh yes, about those remarks. I've made about it being about time for a boy in this family and that we were ready to pass on our lamp, the one made from a gun that was carried by Katherine's great-grandfather in the Civil War and has been handed down

Well, we'll be glad to keep the lamp for a while. And I can hardly wait to go shopping again for little girl things.

ALL THREE AAUW members were selected by the branch memberships as honorees because of their many contri-butions to both the community and the AAUW.

The branch used book sale runs from Sept. 17-20 this year in Livonia Mall. The sale includes extensive collections of both hardbound and paperback books in marge categories, donated to the sale by area residents who have placed the books in barrels placed in cooperating shopping centers.

In addition to the scholarships, some of the sale proceeds will benefit Farm-ington Community Library, Farming-ton Community Center, Farmington Advisory Council, Givil Air Patrol and Farmington Historical Project.
