TV announcer leads sessions

Dwight Weist, co-founder of the Weist-Barron TV acting schools, will headline a "Weekend TV Workshop" for aspiring television actors and actresses Sept. 25-27 at the Fruehauf Mansion in West Bloomfield.

Weist, announcer for the TV soap opera "Search for Tomorrow," will be joined at the workshop by Mike Biard, an agent from the New York Wilhelmina Agency, and John Washbrook, a New York TV talent.

They will discuss the Weist-Barron techniques of how to be most effective on camera, how to handle different types of commercials and the types of auditions an actor will encounter.

The Weist-Barron School of TV Acting in metropolitan Detroit is at 20700 Greenfield, Oak Park. TV acting classes are offered for children, teens and adults. For more information about the workshop and classes call 968-6530.

state-certified certificate program.

Most classes for children and youth ages 7-18 are scheduled for Saturdays. Adult classes are planned for Sunday-Tuesday evenings with Celia Merrill Turner, director.

Classes begin Sept. 26 and end Dec. 20. Courses range from classic and contemporary scene studies to speech, dance, mime, stagecraft and beginning vocal training.

All students enrolled in scene studies perform before an audience at the close of the term. Auditions for production of the Will-O-Way Repertory Theatre are open to Will-O-Way students.

To receive a class schedule or more information call 644-4418.
