Restaurant with special accent opens

By Margaret Miller

They gathered nearly 1,000 strong to endorse a dream.

The place was Garden City's Cambridge Center and the event last Friday was the gala opening of a restaurant that is the first business venture of the Association for Retarded Citizens in this area.

Many of those who thronged Cambridge Club sampled the dinners that are cooked and served by mentally-impaired persons training to move on to the unsheltered business world.

"We served more than 300 dinners after getting 225 reservations," said a harassed but delighted Larry Jones, executive director of the establishment that opened its doors in October and went to a full-time schedule in January.

"We sent out three times for lettuce and tomatoes. Our people really did well in a difficult situation."

Other visitors stopped by to sample hors d'oeuvres and see the place that for years has been on the dreaming boards.

ELECTIVE leaders were present for the grand opening.

Attending were U.S. Rep. William Brodhead, D-Detroit, who gave a brief dedication talk; Livonia Mayor Edward McNamara, who cut the wide yellow ribbon; Circuit Judge James E. Mies, who had closing remarks; and Michigan legislators William Keith, Jack Kirksey, Sylvia Skrel and Robert Geake.

Redford Township clerk Ruth Sullivan; Redford trustee Marilyn Hildebrand; Michigan Supreme Court Justice James Ryan, a Redford resident; District Judge Richard L. Hammer of Garden City; and Wayne County Commissioner Mary Dumas, a Livonian; also were on hand.

So were Dr. Lee Martin, state ARC president, and C. Patrick Babcock, director of the Michigan Department of Mental Health. A congratulatory message was sent by Sen. Donald Riegel, D-Flint.

"IN THIS TIME of budget cuts, it is important to note that this has been put together without tax money," Brodhead commended the ARC Business Ventures Corp. that organized the restaurant.

"That is hopeful. We need public assistance, but there's lots that can be done without it, and you've proved that tonight."

Brodhead noted that Northwest Communities ARC has a history of successes "in educating public officials and the state and country" about the needs of the retarded.

"This time you've outdone yourselves," he added. "I am so impressed."

Dr. Babcock called the club "the most exciting thing I've seen in 18 years in government."

"As part of the state administration,"

Students win scholarships

Three students in Southfield's Providence Hospital School of Medical Technology have been named recipients of the Dr. Donald Kaump Memorial scholarships for the class of June 1992.

The awards are given for excellence in academic and clinical laboratory performance.

Shari Heiden of Farmington was awarded first prize. Sharon Thomas of Huntington Woods and Winfield Wallace of Mount Clemens tied for the second place awards.

These students have completed academic studies in various universities and are now in a year of practical preparation in a medical laboratory. They study at Providence Hospital under the direction of licensed and registered medical technologists and physicians who specialize in pathology.

Dr. Kaump was a former chairman of the Providence department of pathology whose family established a scholarship fund in his memory. The award provides money to help students pay the cost of their scientific education.
