Rev. Robert Schaden

Why not a class on comparative religions?

The battle over how creation came to be seems to be generating no less ignorance and emotion in some circles today than it did when Darwin's monkeys were first taken to court. Apparently there are any number of people to whom it has not occurred that the evolution of creation does not rule out a God any more than a God of creation rules out evolution.

IF WE ARE PRONE to assign a literal interpretation to all that we read, we may do well to allow God the privilege of using poetry to speak a message much larger than our human parasitology could possibly convey.

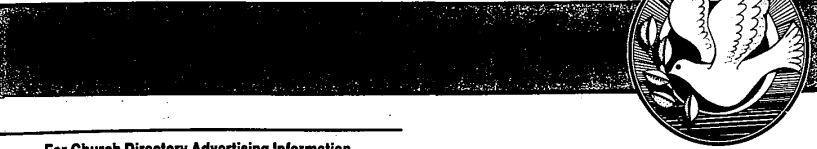

AND SO THE ISSUE of the "how" of

Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn is exhibiting for the first time the first production model of the 1955 Ford, a turquoise and white four-door hardtop with a 410 cubic-inch engine.

Free booklet offers help for consumers

It's there, handy. That's why the telephone is so useful when you have a consumer complaint or question. There are times, however, when help is not available locally. That's when toll-free 800 numbers can offer you no-cost information at your fingertips.
