

Council criticizes mayoral technique

 think a letter was necessary. If I really screwed up, so be it. I'm sorry. But I don't think that's my job.

one is entitled to automatic reappointment, even if they've done a marvelous job. How would we ever get new blood on anything if we just perpetuated past administrations?

"After all, we're all adults. The guy should have known his term was expiring and should have called the mayor."

"The mayor doesn't have all that much power, but he can nominate people of his choice."

Councilman Fred Hughes said he doubted whether it is uniformly understood among boards and commissions that members ought to contact the mayor concerning reappointment.

Aldo Vagozzi, a Farmington Hills resident for the past 22 years, told Council he kept track of Tesner's performance on the zoning board, "and he did a good job."

Burwell said he tried to reappoint everyone who called him expressing interest in reappointment, even some with whom he had misgivings. "But," he added, "I don't think any-

"It's unfortunate he wasn't reappointed. I would hope you'd adopt a policy where people who serve on boards are reappointed unless they're really good."

carrier of the month Farmington

Farmington's February carrier of the month is Danny Hull, an eighth-grader at Power Middle School. A carrier since 1979, he delivers in the Tall Pines Subdivision and the Drakeshire Apartments.
