Protect your investments

As conservationists are fond of saying, trees and shrubbery are an investment in the future. If properly cared for, they can last for generations, providing beauty and value to your property.

Just as you would protect other investments, you should protect your trees and shrubbery. And don't wait until you have a problem, such as tentworms or top-heavy trees that can't support themselves.

A regular routine of "preventive medicine" will make your trees and shrubs thrive. Pruning trees and shrubs and regular spraying for insects protect your investment.

Pruning does three important things for trees: It directs growth, improves health and increases production.

There are several principles to pruning that should be kept in mind. Primary, of course, is the question of when to prune.

First, determine when your plant flo-
