graphology

Lorene Green

I was really excited when I saw your column after the Eccentric. I've always been interested in graphology, and she handwriting of all she enjoys recognition

Dear Lorene:

I was really excited when I saw your column after the Eccentric. I've always been interested in graphology, and often analyze the handwriting of others. The problem is, I can't seem to figure out my own.

I'd be interested to hear any comments or ideas regarding my handwriting style. Thanks.

K.S.

West Bloomfield

Welcome to graphology. Without even looking at your handwriting, I can see you are a woman of discriminating taste.

It is not always easy to be objective when taking a view of one's self. The person with a fair right hand and narrow ovals is usually one to whom objectivity is somewhat difficult. So your dilemma is not surprising. Besides, I think most of us have a tendency to be overly critical in any type of self-analysis.

I admire humor and am pleased to see you too. Life is to enjoy and you can often see the fun side of a situation. You are quite a flexible young woman. You also enjoy recognition, reassurance and the limelight. On occasion, you can probably "ham" it up to bring about the attention.

Basically, you are a person who desires smooth relationships with others, and can charm others with your tact and persuasiveness. While you are probably not the one to start an argument, you are well prepared to meet the challenge if necessary. Disciplining yourself to start new projects and also to keep them going is not always easy for you. And sometimes you place limits on your growth by being a bit opinionated and less than open-minded.

You are no stranger to changing emotions. I think your moods can change quickly and often without a great deal of provocation.

The writing suggests some disparity that you feel about the way your parents disciplined you in the formative years. And do you sometimes forget where you parked the car after completing your shopping.

If you have a question about your handwriting write to Lorene Collett Green, a certified graphologist, in care of this newspaper. Please use a full sheet of white unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Black ink reproduces best. Age and handedness are also helpful.

National Volunteer Week is April 18-24. This is the time each spring that efforts are made to recognize the contributions made by the millions of volunteers in this nation.

Concern Detroit Inc. has good reason to cheer about volunteers. In these difficult economic times, with so many people working and looking for work, many organizations are suffering a loss of volunteer staff. Concern Detroit, Inc. has added five volunteers in the last three months. This column is dedicated to those new volunteers and to the 50 or so others who make this organization more efficient.

According to a recent Gallup survey, a third of America's population volunteer regularly. Ten percent of the adults interviewed claimed they volunteered an average of seven or more hours each week. Half of all surveyed said they volunteered their assistance, working without pay, to help other people in some way.

So here's to all of the faithful volunteers who help this country run smoothly. Hurray, flowers and thank you. We couldn't do it without you.
