Pink champagne has been underrated

Frequently disdained in the very cult world of wine consumers, pink champagne is much misunderstood. It suffers from some stereotypes connected with its use in history that often associates it with frivolity and lavish entertainments. People who are subject to this prejudice do their palates a great disservice. Pinks are a delight both visually and in the taste.

Actually, they are, for the most part, not all that different from their white counterparts. The process by which they are made is the same, the only difference being the amount of skin contact that is allowed between the Pinot Noir grape and the juice processed from them ahead of fermentation.

Or, with lesser wines, the procedure is to use standard white sparkling wines as a base and then add modest color by blending in small amounts of red wine until the color has reached a desired quality. Little enough of the red blend is used so that its contribution to the taste is usually negligible.

THE BIGGEST rap against pinks is that they tend to be sweeter than their counterparts. Not true. When well made, or otherwise, there is no reason for this and it simply is not true.

Rather, pinks often are drier and of somewhat greater body. There will be exceptions, of course, but in general there will be little difference in sugar levels between the two unless the winemaker wants it so.

Both kinds of wines can be made with extreme differences in sweetness. For the consumer, it is unfortunate that the relative sweetness descriptors (brut, extra dry) are not customarily used with the pinks.

There is a good repertoire of pinks to choose from on the shelves of our better wine stores, certainly worth exploring.

French: Chabaut, Gosset, Lanson, Philipponat, Pol Roger (all non-vintage) and Bollinger, Dom Ruinhart, Henriot, Laurent-Perrier, Moet et Chandon, Perrier-Jouet, Piper Heidsieck, Roederer Cristal and even Taittinger makes one, all of these carrying vintage dates usually.

California: Almaden (Oeil de Perdrix), Christian Brothers (Pink), Dominus Chandon (Blanc de Noir), Grand Cru (cuvée de Pinot Noir), Korbel (both a Rose and a Blanc de Noir), Kornell (Pink-Rose), Masson (Crackling Rose) and Stony Ridge (Blanc de Noir).

And the new, highly prestigious entries into the champagne field from California, Chateau St. Jean and Piper Sonoma, will also be marketing pinks under one name or another, along with the more conventional white assortments. These should be available to us in the next year or two.

Treated with respect, well chilled in fluted glasses, the effervescent pink beaded stuff can be a true visual delight to offer a guest. Better yet, to enjoy yourself.

Attic sells new seats

The Attic Theatre in Detroit has mounted a campaign to sell new, upholstered seats for installation before the opening of the 1982-83 season Sept. 17.

Seats cost $50 each. Persons purchasing seats will receive a receipt for tax purposes, an inscribed name plaque on each seat and recognition in the donor honor roll. All participants will be invited to a special performance of "March of the Falsettos" this fall. An afterglow party will follow the performance.

Over half the seats have yet to be sold," said Herbert Ferrer, director of development. "All the seats must be sold by Sept. 17."

For more information, call Ferrer at 953-7750.
