

Bit of Halloween spirit visits the halls of Henry Ford center

Henry Ford Hospital's West Bloomfield Center goes all out for Halloween. The Maple Road facility may have looked more like a masquerade party than a medical facility last Friday. But the many employees who followed the center's custom of dressing up for Halloween carried on business as usual. A white-robed guardian angel greeted patients at the reception desk. In the business office, a green-faced witch set up appointments. And upstairs, a cheerleader in blue and gold filled away medical records.

"Usually we have trouble keeping the babies quiet while we weigh them," said befeathered Elg Bird Diane Theriault, registered nurse in the pediatric department. "Today they are so busy looking at our costumes, they haven't even cried."

Pediatrics also included an Indian princess, a cowgirl and a Raggedy Ann. Asked why she was in her usual whites, physician assistant Karen Kotch said "Would you take advice on your baby's medication from someone dressed up like Frankenstein?"

Dorothy Welmen treats visitors royally from behind her desk at the Henry Ford center.

Jean Norgiel R.N. (left) of Troy, checks the condition of Pamela Brady with the help of Dolores Tomansil (right) of Novi.

Margaret Bldinger keeps an eye out for goblins from the Patient Registration department.

Staff photos by Randy Borst

Marieno Kwapisz went about her duties as business-office receptionist while dressed as a green witch. She is a resident of Farmington.

An angelic sight was waiting for visitors to the main lobby thanks to Mary Michniacki.

Collar it while...just right for sportshirts, and GENO proves it. Before, only dress shirts got the white-collar treatment. So we applaud this duo of sportshirts topped in white. It's casual ease with sophistication. A touch of distinction for even denims. For the man who takes his sporting-life seriously, it's the best of both. Find a handsome selection of solids, $26; stripes and plaids, $28. Polyester/cotton, S-M-L-XL. In The Woodward Shops for Men, at Downtown, Northland, Eastland, Oakland, Fairlane and Twelve Oaks.

hudson's woodward shops for men

ORDER BY PHONE: 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. In Metro Detroit, call 569-2454. Elsewhere, order toll-free 1-800-233-2000.