Computer concepts class to be repeated in center

Computer Introduction for Adults, a four-week class scheduled early in the fall and sold out before it got under way, will be repeated by instructor Harriet MacDowell in Farmington Community Center. The class that teaches basic computer concepts begins at 7:30 p.m., Nov. 24 and continue on Wednesdays in the center, 24705 Farmington Road.

Participants will learn computer terminology, concepts, hardware, software and computer functions in an easy-to-understand presentation.

Examples of various computers for home use will be demonstrated along with comparison of functions and prices.

MacDowell feels that her class will give participants enough knowledge so they can shop comfortably when buying a computer to fit their needs.

Fee for the class is $35, payable with registration in the center.
