

D. Dennison's hostess and waitress Shelly Main seated patrons whose mouths watered for monkfish, silver salmon and lemon sole, and whose minds (if not bodies) took a trip to the tropics at lunchtime Tuesday. The seafood tavern is donating a portion of its food and beverage sales as part of a week-long American Cancer Society benefit.

Think summer, fight cancer

Lately, by the time patrons leave D. Dennison's Seafood Tavern they're less tempted to go back to the office than they are to sway their hips to reggae music and sun themselves under the palm trees in the lobby.

It's "Escape to the Tropics" week at the seafood spot at 1st Mile and Orchard Lake roads, and benefiting is the American Cancer Society.

All proceeds from a contest go to the cancer society. The contest winners will be flown by Eastern Airlines to St. Croix in the Virgin Islands and accommodated for one week by the Grapetree Beach Hotel.

D. Dennison's is donating a percentage of what it makes on food and beverage sales. Bacardi Rum of Birmingham has kicked in decorations including an umbrella table and a life raft (now hanging from the ceiling) as well as recipes for Bahama Mamas, Miami Whammys and Mal Tals. Jacobson's supplied the straw hut hostess stand, stuffed parrots and palm trees, sand, coconuts and lobster trap.

FOLKS STROLLING into D. Dennison's for lunch Tuesday "were a little bewildered" to see waitresses scurrying about wearing floppy straw hats and sunglasses, flowered cotton tops, leis, shorts and espadrilles.

"We're all getting strange looks — people don't know what's going on," said Mary Finney, dressed in a purple muumuu and a matching straw hat.

"They'll get used to it — it's fun."

Farmington Hills' Merry Bates, a volunteer for the American Cancer Society, was greeting new arrivals in the restaurant lobby, not minding a bit the two-day, 12-hour job she willingly undertook.

"I decided instead of wasting my free time, I'd do something. It makes you feel better about yourself," said the Michigan State graduate.

"Tropical week" ignited a spark plug for D. Dennison's employees trying to shake the winter blues, said the restaurant's Cindi Maciolek, who for the past month and a half has worked an additional 20-25 hours per week organizing the benefit.

"We wanted to do something special to benefit someone else and to get us motivated. Our idea was to do a tropical week, and for the charity, we wanted something big enough that people knew who they were and (an organization) that keeps funds in the community," she said.

Aiming low, Maciolek estimates about $3,000 will be raised for the cancer society.

Topping off tropical week will be Monday's "Escape to the Tropics Dinner." The restaurant will feature New England clam chowder, salad, and a choice of entrees: linguine primavera, fried shrimp and broiled petite filet and rice pilaf, or chargrilled swordfish steak and parsley potatoes, plus a half carafe of wine per couple, chocolate mousse and coffee, for $17.50.

All of Monday night's profits will go to the cancer society.

"The whole idea is to make people think summer and realize we're community-minded and out to help people," Maciolek said.

Reading disorder needs to come out of the closet

By M.B. Dillon Ward

Kyle, a 26-year-old Farmington resident, is unable to hold down a job because of it. It's why attending school humiliated him, and the reason he doesn't date.

Like thousands of others in metro Detroit, Kyle suffers from a common yet often unrecognized disorder called dyslexia. Dyslexics, many of whom possess normal and above average intelligence, encounter great difficulty with spelling, reading and mathematics because of a neurological inefficiency.

Most are unable to progress beyond the junior high school reading level.

DR. JOHN G. FRAUENHEIM of Farmington, a clinical counselor, said hundreds of thousands of America's 25 million illiterates — people completely unable to read or write — are dyslexic. Dyslexia sufferers have included New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller and Olympic gold medalist Bruce Jenner, he added. Yet, with the exception of educators, society generally remains unaware of dyslexia.

"In schoolhood, it's still in the closet. There's a lot of rejection out there, but it's something that has to be brought out into the open," said Fraumenheim, director of clinical counseling at William Beaumont Hospital's Neuro-Education Center in Royal Oak.

mont Hospital's Neuro-Education Center in Royal Oak.

"A dyslexic who has a job working on cars may use the people around him to avoid revealing his disorder. If he needed some information from a manual, he might pretend he's working on a car and say to another employee, 'Hey, what does that manual say?'"

Other dyslexics resort to wrapping their hands in a cast when applying for a job, or avoid paying by check in public to hide their condition.

"All dyslexics have similar experiences in terms of a significant need to keep the problem hidden from others, feeling isolated, and not knowing what it is," added Fraumenheim, who holds a Ph.D. in educational psychology from Wayne State University and has worked with dyslexics for 25 years.

"WE'RE TOUCHING on a subject that's been very hush-hush," agreed Lou Yonce of Troy, a dyslexic and 31-year-old jeweler who made the engagement ring Henry Ford II gave his present wife. "It was harder to tell my wife I couldn't read than it was to ask her to get married. And telling my mother-in-law was really traumatic."

Agreed Kyle: "It's affected my whole social life — and it's hard to talk about. I dated someone once for a while, and never told her I couldn't read. I'm always on guard and walking away from people, worried I'm going to have to read a piece of paper."

Lou and Kyle, both high school graduates, are tutored by special teachers and meet with other dyslexics at the Neuro-Education Center. Kyle hopes to build up his reading and writing skills so that he can return to his automotive sales job.

Lou's job, which involves managing 20 people and designing jewelry for a Detroit manufacturer, is so important to him he "has to let it out" and learn to relax with people.

Often, there's no indication that something is medically wrong with a dyslexic. Symptoms include an inability to learn to read adequately despite normal intelligence and normal opportunity for learning. Dyslexic children are unable to sound out phonics and have difficulties recognizing words and symbols, said Dr. Ralph D. Rabinovitch, director of clinical research at Northville's Hawthorn Center, a public mental health children's facility.

DYSLEXICS TEND to blame their condition on a variety of things, says Fraumenheim.

"They'll say, 'I was my first-grade teacher.' 'It was because of my parents,' or, 'I'm just dumb.'"

The soul searching led one of Fraumenheim's patients to believe that his witnessing of a plane accident in which a person was decapitated caused his inability to read.

Rabinovitch said the cause of dyslexia is very likely some circuitry in the brain that prohibits any learning of symbols, letters and words.

Though usually unapparent until the end of first or second grade, dyslexia is present at birth. Evidence indicates it is hereditary, and that the condition is 20 times more common in boys than in girls. There is some type of sex linkage, which many times is transmitted by the mother. Most researchers think the parietal lobe to the back and left of the brain is the affected area, added Rabinovitch.

Work done at Harvard University suggests that in some dyslexic children, the left hemisphere of the brain is less developed than the right. The left side of the brain deals with language, speech and reading, while the right controls artistic and constructive skills.

"The specific nature of the neurological problem will probably be understood in the coming years because of brain scans," said Rabinovitch, a long-time dyslexia researcher.

SCREENING PROGRAMS in schools now are detecting dyslexic children and referring them to special classes for the learning disabled — something that wasn't happening 20 years ago, he added.

"For many years, many children with this condition were considered retarded and given inappropriate programs. Now, with modern development of special education, we're beginning to offer what they need."

"And the earlier remediation (very specific reading and language training) is started, the better the hope for the future," he said.

There's help for adult dyslexics as well.

"We do screening here at the Hawthorn Center, and I'd be delighted to talk to anyone," said Rabinovitch, who can be reached at 340-3000.

Persons wishing to contact Fraumenheim may call 265-3532.

D. Dennison's Wendy Williams (left) and Mary Finney (right) got some strange looks from people while on their way to work Tuesday. Finney's muumuu and Williams' nose, white with suntan lotion, fit the atmosphere at the restaurant which is celebrating "Escape to the Tropics Week" to benefit the American Cancer Society.
