

Elderly couple tie the ribbon

A FRIENDSHIP grew when Marian Ward offered to chauffeur Uhl to group card games because he does not drive.

"The friendship developed into a romance," Uhl said. "I never realized anything like that could happen to me."

"It was very natural for us to be together," Marian Uhl said. "There was no attraction between us."

"I didn't think we would ever marry. There has to be a certain amount of similarity to your lives when you get to our age. You don't want a lot of change."

Marian Uhl said she worked to overcome the loneliness of being widowed following the death of her husband of 42 years.

"I didn't let it bother me being an odd person at a dinner party or other events. You have to give of yourself in order to have people come to you. You have to keep yourself occupied and interested in what others are doing and not just brooding about yourself."

"After my first husband passed away

I made up my mind I wasn't going to stay home and be a hermit. I decided every day I would get dressed and go out for a meal. Then I joined Mature Miners."

"If you stay home and look out the window, you'll begin climbing the walls," added her husband.

TODAY THE couple say they cherish their newfound companionship.

"Companionship is something you've just got to have," Marian Uhl said.

The days are filled with variety. At least once a week the two play pool with a Mature Miners group in which Marian is the only woman involved in the sport. Card games at the Troy Community Center and Holy Spirit Church in West Bloomfield also vie for their time.

Marian loves to cook and Adam likes to dine out so they do both. The trees and grounds around their home attract wildlife, and Uhl has taken to feeding the squirrels which come around each day.

Neither Marian nor Adam Uhl expected to remarry following the death of their spouses. But the two discovered romance followed on the heels of their friendship.

As I discussed in my previous column, most back pain results from either strain upon ligaments and muscles, or from pressure on nerves as they exit from the spine. Each of these causes is associated with different symptoms. This column will help you a way to identify what cause is most probably in your case.

Strain of ligament or muscle strain, the pain usually begins in the low back and moves up in the direction of the neck, or down to the sacrum (the tailbone) or across the back. Occasionally the discomfort is in the buttocks or anterior thigh.

In a nerve pain case, the nerve entrapment has a different pattern: discomfort travels down the buttock, thigh and leg, to the foot. The exact pattern depends on the particular nerve being compressed.

If you are experiencing one of these patterns, you should see a doctor immediately. If the pain is not extreme, there are steps you can take to decrease your discomfort. I will discuss these measures in my next column.

Dr. Weiss invites inquiries from readers, please send your questions to his office.
