

Illness emphasizes forgotten abilities of everyday living

It was clearly marked . . . no smoking area. They were sitting under the sign and smoking furiously. They were nurses from an area hospital, on their afternoon break.

I was sitting with a woman from the parish I serve as pastor. I had just visited her 7-year-old son, hospitalized with a severe digestive disorder.

She was sharing some of her experiences with her son.

As an infant, he had been unable to keep food down and had baffled doctors for weeks. Finally, they had removed his stomach.

HIS ESOPHAGUS HAD to be stretched first every day and then every week. Finally, he was able to leave the hospital and go home.

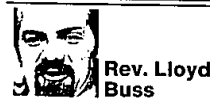

The parents lovingly cared for their son. At hospital check-up time, the medical staff would express delight at his stamina and growth. The parents interpreted that to mean that the medical staff was surprised their son had survived.

Now, the boy's poor circulation has led to other problems. During a recent illness, his toes and part of his feet were cut off from a supply of blood.

The boy is now facing the loss of part of both.

THE MOTHER TOLD me how she and her husband had become more sensitive and grateful for the gifts of life they had once taken for granted. They had accepted the gift of responsibility for the care of their son.

Most never think about the workings of the body's digestive system. In the process, food goes down the esophagus and the stomach pulls it through the process of nourishing the body. Their son's stomach reversed the process. He could keep nothing down.

Now that their son cannot walk because he is waiting for foot and toe surgery, they have become acutely aware of how limited one's mobility is when dependent on either a wheelchair or a parent's loving arm.

AND THEY HAVE learned how important toes are for maintaining balance.

Life has changed drastically for both parents and child. What was once commonplace has become meaningful. What others take for granted they regard with special appreciation. What others might treat casually they attend to with loving care.

In the midst of pain and anguish, life has unfolded its importance to them. It is a gift they cherish and affirm with love.

Nurses smoking cigarettes in designated non-smoking areas in hospital cafeterias is certainly not a sign that the world is ending. It is, however, a disregard for life's gifts.

I was wrong in not reminding them of life's worth and care. The nurses were remiss in not remembering.

Scatter rugs pose a threat to seniors

Dear Jo:

I was glad to see your column on the dangers of scatter rugs (or mats) to our older population.

As an emergency room nurse, I see many admissions of older people with broken bones (mostly hips) caused by falling or tripping over an "innocent looking" scatter rug.

I don't know why older people use them; they must feel they make a room look "homey." They are used almost everywhere in the home and sometimes even two or three of them to a room.

Attempts to either tape or nail them to the floor just don't work.

My suggestion for your readers with scatter rugs is for them to rid their homes of these potentially dangerous items as they are extremely hazardous to their health and well-being.

Ms. Marg G.R.V.

Dear Jo:

So many people my age seem to come down with shingles? Exactly what is this disease and how is it treated?

Ms. Mrs. G. age 74.

Dear Mrs. G.:

Shingles or Herpes Zoster is an acute infection caused by the varicellazoster virus. It is an itching and painful skin rash on the face or trunk and is most seen in older adults. The rash usually follows the underlying route of a cranial or spinal nerve, and appears as a series of tiny blisters that eventually break and form a crust.

The symptoms of the infection persist anywhere from two to five weeks. After healing the pain of the neuritis may remain for months in some individuals.

Mr. R. Mc. age 71.

A. Jolayne Farrell

There is no specific treatment for shingles. Calamine lotion and pain medications are comfort measures.

Since shingles is slightly infectious, appropriate precautions must be taken. Medical help should be sought for this painful condition as complication can develop.

Dear Jo:

When you request that some of the readers of your column write to you with their philosophy of life, I thought, not me, I'm no writer. Then I found this quote from John A. Schindler, which pretty well says how I feel.

- Do not be on the lookout of ill health.
- Keep usefully at work.
- Have a hobby.
- Learn to be satisfied.
- Keep on liking people.
- Meet adversity valiantly.
- Meet the little problems of life with decision.
- Above all, maintain a good sense of humor, beat down by saying something pleasant every time you get the chance.
- Live and make the present hour pleasant and cheerful. Keep your mind out of the past, and keep it out of the future.
