State Law Bans Job Bias On Sex

By ATTORNEY GENERAL FRANK J. KELLEY

'This is a public service article explaining in general terms a provision of Michigan law. Individuals who wish to determine the effect of any law upon their private legal affairs should consult a private attorney.'

Under federal and Michigan law, employment discrimination based on sex is illegal. The main thrust of these laws is to protect women against job exclusion based on their sex. They can, however, be applied to men as well.

In a large majority of complaints filed with the Michigan Civil Rights Commission, the alleged discrimination involves the denial of employment or upgrading opportunity to women.

In the past, these job exclusions have been based on requirements of physical exertion - usually weight lifting - or long hours. The law is now clear that, with minor exceptions, a woman cannot be excluded from employment because the job entails physical exertion or long hours at overtime rates.

FEDERAL CIRCUIT court decisions prohibit limitations on the maximum weight which female employees can lift in their work. Such limitations constitute sex discrimination illegal under the equal employment opportunity provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

Shortly after the effective date of the Michigan sex discrimination law, the Michigan Department of Law dropped its weight lifting restrictions for women.

Free Health Forum To Be Held May 8

"How to Keep Your Husband Alive" will be discussed at a free public forum scheduled at 10 a.m. Friday, May 8, at Northland Theater, Southfield.

Dr. Krehl, chairman of the Department of Preventive Medicine, Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, will talk about the effect of food on health, and especially on the health of human arteries.

ACCORDING TO Dr. Krehl, artery blockage disease, caused largely by a diet containing a surplus of calories and saturated fats, begins in childhood and develops slowly over the years.

The free forum is sponsored by the Wayne County Medical Society and the Detroit News. It will include a fashion show by the J. L. Hudson Co. and everyone attending will receive a copy of the Heart Association cook book folder, "The Way to a Man's Heart."
