

Festival entertainers

Members of The Suburban Chorus take the spotlight on the Hart Plaza stage at 5:45 p.m. as part of Freedom Festival's entertainment on the Detroit River front. Taking part in the 45-minute show are Phyllis Leitch (at left), Lorraine Pyle, Ann Christopoulos and Ben Scaglione. Scaglione is a Farmington Hills resident who was assistant director for The Kendallarks, a community women's chorus which entertained locally for 22 years.

Toastmasters call soapbox orators to vent their gripes

Anyone who has a gripe to vent will have an opportunity to do that 1890 sidewalk-style during Dearie Days in Plymouth's Old Village.

"Any speaker that wants to step up on the soapbox and say their two bits' worth for two minutes is invited to do so," said Phyllis Sullivan, who is doing the scheduling for the soapbox orators Saturday, July 16.

The invitation comes from members of the Oral Majority Toastmasters Club, which is sponsoring the out-of-doors podium.

"Here is your chance to vent your gripes without taking them out on your spouse or your boss. Or if you have something to tell the world, here is the forum," Sullivan said.

The club invites individuals to speak to the man in the street, and it also invites clubs or groups to send a representative to give their message to the public. The club will host speakers from various clubs of Toastmasters International who will be delivering speeches that day.

Those wishing a spot on the soapbox are invited to call Sullivan, 455-1633.
