

To those who assisted

The Eccentric would like to express a sincere thank you to the men, women and children who took part in the preparation of the Fall Fashion supplement, and to those who hosted what must have appeared to be an army of the most attractive people imaginable during the preparation of the section.

Special thanks must also be extended to Mario Bitonti and Farrell Reis, two extremely talented hairdressers, and their helpers, who designed hairstyles, and in some cases entire new looks, for the faces you will see in the issue.

Also, prominent contributions were made by makeup stylists Janet Adler and Patti Besette of Mira Linder, and Jacobson's hair stylists Kathy Males and Lisa Ferrell-Ernest, and the fashion coordinators who selected, arranged, fitted appointments, and kept their senses of humor despite almost unbearable heat that blanketed the area during location shoots.

Also helpful were the staff of Jacques restaurant, who patiently worked around us during a session at the Birmingham restaurant, and the men of the 177 MP Bde. (Brigade) Command at the Detroit Artillery Army.

Enthusiasm was the distinctive characteristic that made each of these groups and individuals indispensable to the success of the project.

On the cover

Fashion Fall '83 places the emphasis on the finest fabrics, complete attention to detail right down to accessories, and workmanship not seen in years. On the cover, for her, Harve Bernard's fall suiting in gray flannel, $230, Regina Porter's blouse, $50, and an important extra, Donald Brooks' silver fox coat, $28,950. The gray flannel story continues with his single-breasted suit by Hart Schaffner & Marx, $355, Christian Dior spread-collar shirt, $31.50, and the Hart Schaffner & Marx single-breasted herringbone coat in charcoal gray (available in September). All from Hudson's.
