

Restlessness is seen in writing

Dear Lorene:
I've enjoyed reading your handwriting analyses over the past few years, and have become interested in what you might discover in my own handwriting. Many have found it somewhat difficult to read, and I normally turn to printing, which even I find more comfortable to read and write.
Lately, I've been stopping to examine which direction I'd like to head in for my career, life and social relationship. I thought an analysis such as this might help me get a better feeling for direction. Thank you for your help.

I've enjoyed reading the past few years, that you might discover have found it somewhat more time to go

Dear L.C.:
First of all, let us consider your minuscule handwriting size and careful punctuation. This tells me you are a person with good concentration. You do not like distractions when you are involved in a project. And you are very observant, little escapes your watchful eyes. Each and every detail is important to you. And you have a certain skill for putting ideas into practice.
Now let us turn to the extreme caution that is revealed in the combination of those long straight word ending and your small writing. One has to wonder what unfortunate experiences have made you so wary.
Then I see there is often a reticence about you: When things are bothering you, it is not easy for you to communicate this also to your concern with whatever symbols love to you.

Not let us consider those overblown loops which signals a very vivid imagination. There is also some literary aptitude in your handwriting. This is coupled with your dramatic flair, could conceivably take you into writing romantic novels. You have the facility to turn an atom of experience into a galaxy of significance.
There is a restlessness in your handwriting. Your need for change and variety is definitely here. So this seems like a natural time to examine where you would like to go with your life. Perhaps a starting point might be to check out the reasons for your overly cautious approach to so many things and then make the necessary changes.
I am pleased that you have enjoyed my column over the years. Best wishes to you, L.C., as you seek new goals in your young life.

Many of your goals appear to be directed toward material assets. I suspect this not only relates to money or possessions, but If you have a question about your handwriting, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, in care of this newspaper. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper writing in the first person singular. Age and handedness are also helpful. Feedback is always welcomed.
