A puppy or kitten with a bright bow under the tree might make a lovely photograph, but one organization suggests that Christmas may not be the best time to bring home an animal.

Pet-a-Care suggests that the coming and going of the family is not the best situation to bring an animal into and often forms a bad foundation which leads to behavioral problems later. The organization also suggests being sure that the animal is wanted in the home and that the family can afford the vaccines and feeding of the animal. Pet allergies should also be considered.

The Pet Information Bureau suggests that a gift certificate from a pet shop might be the best compromise. Once holiday activity has subsided, gift-getter and giver can plan a leisurely trip to a pet shop or animal shelter and choose the new companion together.

The bureau also has a few tips for making pet selection easier.

- Birds will provide spring interest all year. Small birds such as parakeets and singing canaries are easy to buy and cost only about $20 per year. Initial outlay for a bird includes a cage ranging from $20-$40; bird canaries, parakeets, and seed and water dishes.

● Fish-keeping is a popular hobby. Most pet shops stock a variety of complete aquarium setups, including gravel, pump, filter and heater for $25. By being provided with the equipment, the recipient then can select fish that appeal to him or her.
