JUDGE TUTTLE'S CANDIDACY.

The entrance of Judge Arthur J. Tuttle of the United States Circuit Court of Detroit, into the senatorial race for nomination at the August primaries clarifies the republican political atmosphere in Michigan, so far as the senatorship is concerned.

The names of several very estimable and able men have been suggested as candidates and a number of them have quite a strong support, but none of them have been greeted with a show of enthusiasm that evidences a feeling of satisfaction among the republicans generally throughout the state. Many republicans have withheld expression of choice hoping that just such a person as Judge Tuttle might be induced to enter the race.

The Enterprise is of the opinion that the candidacy of the Judge will gather strength with each day of the campaign. He is well and favorably known throughout the state. His record on the bench has won for him the admiration of all classes and his ability is unquestioned. With Judge Tuttle as a candidate for the senatorship at the November election there will be no doubt as to the outcome.

Whenever Judge Tuttle has been put to the test on matters affecting the interests of the public he has always proved himself to be courageous and about as near right as it is humanly possible to be.

The state and the nation needs just such men in congress, and especially at the present time.

Being a Wife and Mother

By MYRA CURTIS LANE
(21, Western Newspaper Union)

THE little, middle-aged woman, unmistakably a spinster, from her appearance, sat facing the mother of three in the train. The three were all under the age of seven. There were two more, she learned later, in conversation. Acquaintance was quickly made—it was inevitable. It began with bows. The youngest, emptied a bottle of milk over the spinster's lap.

The spinster was on her way home from a visit to a relative. It was her first holiday in years. She was going back to the daily grind that had become a part of her life. And she had been thinking bitterly as she returned how her dead with her.

She had been married to be married about ten years before, and she had been very much in love. Her lover and she quarreled. There had been senseless pride on both sides. Then they had drifted away from each other. And—that was all.

But how she had longed for marriage and motherhood! How dreary life had been for her! With half-a-dozen children tagging after her, she could still have felt that her mission in life was fulfilled.

And she had married the pretty little boy, who was now joyously the spinster's son.

"You must find them a trial!" "Oh, of course, young children like that. But I suppose it's a woman's destiny to do it!"

"I suppose so," I mean, of course, I answered, the spinster continued. You were very much in love with my husband. And so I gave up my plans of a career for myself in order to settle down into a wife. I had artistic ability. I would have done well."

"But to be a wife and mother is so much finer," said the spinster seriously.

"Perhaps—I don't know. After all one doesn't choose his wife. One just gets married about by fate. That's what I have a good husband, and that he still care for me!"

The youngest child set up a wail. The second was tired. He began to cry. The eldest was hungry. The mother searched for food in a scratcher. For awhile the children, three of them, were crying at the top of their voices.

"Let me hold the youngest," said the spinster, lifting him over her lap. The child sobbed, shamed, tender. She pushed her arms. He struck at her apologetically the mother removed him. She squirmed him.

"And she was thinking, 'Why did I ever marry?' But she hadn't the courage to tell the other that. And the spinster was envying her.

Night came on. Three little tired heads lined the seat in a row. The mother was worn out, too. She slept fitfully. They were nearing their destination.

"I have to thank you so much," said the mother to the spinster. "You have been so kind to mind my—my son."

"It isn't much, not minding. You see, I'm fond of children, and I have no chance to take care of any."

The mother glanced at her thin, angular figure, and knew that she had never marry. And she had abandoned all thought of that loss before.

"It's work in a large office." The spinster smiled. "Well, here we are. I hope that we shall meet again."

"Why shouldn't we?" The mother was searching in her reticule for a card. "I should like to see you again some time." She found the card and handed it to her. The spinster took her name, gave her address. They parted, and the spinster stood looking after them as they went off into the darkness; the children frantically tagging after the mother.

"I wonder if I'm glad or sorry," the spinster soliloquized. "Of course children are a nuisance. Still, if they had been Jim's."

She looked mechanically at the card that the mother had given her. She was Jim's wife.

The Scraps Book

Writer Declares Cat Teaches Man Repose

I believe that every household should contain a cat, not only for decorative and domestic values, but because the cat in repose is both a robust and an inspiration to irritable, tense, restless and tortured men and women.

In spite of the fact that there are a hundred cats published every year in books, human beings are told to "relax"—relaxation and continued energy seems to be required in order to keep quiet—very few men, women or children have mastered even the elementary principles of repose.

The bodies of children and the minds of adults keep tunable only by conscious and continuous effort, which is a condition very different from rest; we try just as hard to rest as we do to keep going. I have read in a famous book called "Power Through Rest" that I read the statement that when the ordinary mortal gets into bed he does not readily relax; he tries to hold the bed down. Many in bed will discover that they have their fates clenched.

Now when the cat decides to take its repose it not only lies down, it pours its body out on the floor like a glass of water. It is restful, need to behold. The average man looks upon the morning paper and roars up the only repose of our lawns; this is the time he happens to see the famous cat who is either totally uninterested, or, if thoughtful, is thinking only of breakfast. The cat seems to put to the household every day the Emersonian question—why so poor, little man?
