THE HOLIDAY SPIRIT

Most holidays really fail to impress people with their true significance. On July 4 people think more of getting off from work than of the real meaning of American freedom. On the birthdays of great Americans few of us pause to think about the true meaning of their lives upon our time.

But this is not so with Christmas. It is the season when the whole human race seems to come a little closer together in friendship and love. Somehow we seem to get nearer to the ideal of universal brotherhood of man at this particular season.

To be convinced of this just recall some trip you have taken on a train at holiday time. Crowds pile on and off at every station, mails are jammed, and hour after hour seems to be lost from the regular train schedule.

At ordinary times passengers would get quite out of sorts—would say ugly things about the road and the men who are operating the trains. But at Christmas time everybody is too happy to be annoyed. Bright animated faces greet you from every platform and from every part of the crowded coach.

We are all going back home, to see the folks and old friends, these happy faces seem to say, and when such a spirit pervades the very atmosphere, it is simply impossible to get grouchy.

Christmas is dedicated throughout the Christian world to furthering the true spirit of Christianity. It is expressed best in a friendly face and an open heart.

A total eclipse of the sun can be seen January 24.
