WORTH SAVING FINING TUBERCULOSIS

Jack and Betty are both at Howell where they are being treated for tuberculosis. Their father and mother are both dead from the disease. The parents did not have treatment in time. Many children are given a chance when you buy tuberculosis Christmas seals.

Through the clinics of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, and of the local organizations throughout the state, thousands of men, women, and children are examined each year. The tuberculosis X-ray seals make possible the sealing of those that come about through the clinics.

Predicts Aerial Cities
 An amazing picture of future cities built far above the earth on platforms reached by tower elevators is presented by Frederick Kiesler, a prominent young Viennese architect. He predicts that houses in the future will be built on platforms supported by steel girders several hundred feet above the ground. They will be erected above beautiful gardens, shady forests, or even above lakes or the sea. Platforms will be provided, too, as landing places for airplanes, he believes.—Popular Science Monthly.

Prized Museum Exhibits
 Mammals of the age of reptiles are so rare that they can be seen in only a few museums. The Peabody museum of Yale university possesses probably the best collection in this country, or indeed anywhere. The American Museum of Natural History in New York and the United States National museum in Washington also have excellent collections.

Bare-Faced Suggestion
 A woman informs us that cosmetics are going out. Last year "nude" hosiery was the fad, this year it may be nude complexions.—Boston Transcript.

Wise Ones
 The Grand Duchess Cyril said many clever things during her American visit. She told a New York girl reporter:
 "The women most successful with men are not the beautiful ones, but the wise ones. And the wise ones are those who know that men are only babies with heads."—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

Ancient Human Race Decapitated Its Dead
 In making certain excavations at Ecuilancourt, near St. Germain, French workmen have discovered a number of human skeletons, which authorities believe date from the Merovingian period about 650 A. D. First reports stated that the skeletons were those of a race of giants all measuring over seven feet, but these fantastic proportions have been disproved, although the remains are those of very big men.
 The most curious part of the discovery is that in each case the head of the buried man has been discovered and is held in a pair of bony arms, leading to the belief that the early Franks were fearful of ghosts, and in order to prevent the dead from visiting the living adopted the custom of decapitation. The failure to find any of the jewels or ornaments with which the Merovingians usually buried their dead, is accounted for by the fact that the graves have probably been violated.

Off the Family Tree
 Henry White, the famous diplomat, told a family anecdote at a luncheon at Elm court, his Lenox villa.
 "One of my ancestors," he said, "was irregular in his church attendance, but he had two colored men servants who were never absent from divine service.
 "The parson met my ancestor on the road one day and said:
 "Look here, colonel, I don't see you very often in your pew in church."
 "No, parson you don't, but my two niggers are always there."
 "Yes, that's true," said the parson, "but two blacks don't make a white."
