

second runs Tom Panzenhagen

"Public Enemy" (1931), 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Friday through Sunday running time 84 minutes. "White Heat" (1949), 7:20 and 9:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, running time 114 minutes. "The Roaring Twenties" (1939), 7:20 and 9:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, March 22, running time 108 minutes. Alcatraz the Washington Theatre, 420 S. Washington, Royal Oak, phone 541-0082, $2.50 adults, $1.50 children under 14.

James Cagney fans won't want to miss three films that amount to a retrospective of Cagney's first 20 years in films. "Yankee Doodle Dandy" is missing, but "Public Enemy," "White Heat" and "The Roaring Twenties" — all gangster films — show Cagney at his best at ages 30, 40 and 39, respectively.

"Public Enemy" is a raw, dynamic, straight-forward account of the life and death of a gangster. It makes few excuses for its portrayal of a common run-runner turned public enemy, and Cagney is powerful as the misguided, ill-fated Tom Powers.

Tuning systems to be illustrated

Professor Owen Jorgensen of Michigan State University will present an unusual piano program at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Varner Hall, Oakland University.

The free lecture/recital program will be introduced by Thomas V. Pettit, piano technician for the Jean Harlow, Joan Blondell and Mae Clarke, who gets the grapefruit in the face, co-star.

Rating: $3.

"The Roaring Twenties" made well after a censorship board called the Hays Office cracked down on unseemly movie plots and character types, offers plenty of excuses for the motivation of its central figure, a World War I veteran with readjustment problems who's cornered into a life of crime. Director Raoul Walsh still packs a lot of punch into an otherwise-outdated plot. Humphrey Bogart, Priscilla Lane and Frank McHugh co-star.

Rating: $2.00.

Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

Then Jorgensen will illustrate various historic tuning systems on several grand pianos. His compilation of some 11 historic ear tunings has become a worldwide reference.
