

Suburban Life

Loraine McClash editor/477-5450

Thursday, August 23, 1984 O&E

(F)19

addressing fashion

Margery
Stearns Krevsky

Choices

There's plenty to pick from in fall fashions

Choices is the key word for the uniqueness of this fall's fashion.

For every lifestyle and approach to dressing, there is a good and positive trend happening. For the fashion individualist there are layers of sweaters from which to choose.

We talked to model Carlene Lindsey of Detroit. A former Miss Michigan United, she likes the challenge that new trends bring.

"When a new trend happens I like to experiment with it," she says.

"I have always loved clothes and the way they are put together. Every new season I try the new accessories, the new ways of wearing things.

"It's like an art form that keeps changing. If I don't like something I don't put it in my fashion wearing vocabulary."

Carlene is a person who likes to be the first to try most everything from the low flat boot to new geometric shaped earrings.

The fashion philosophy of Bob Benekert, owner of the Claymore Shop and Polo Shop is different.

Please turn to Page 2

DAVID FRANK/staff photographer

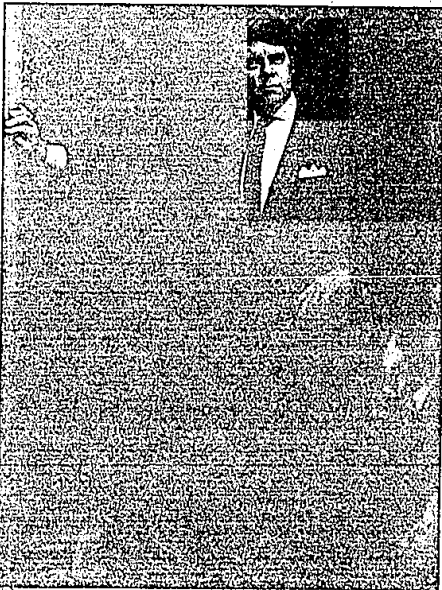

Barbara Boucel of Birmingham shows off a white wool crepe evening cape jacket from Hudson's. Cost: $300.

GARY CASKEY/staff photographer

Jane Bearse of Madison Heights updates a classic with a plaid skirt and blouse at $80 each and a $50 jacket jacket from Casual Corners at Summit Place, Telegraph and Elizabeth Lake roads.

GARY CASKEY/staff photographer

Bob Benekert, owner of the Claymore Shop and Polo Shop, models a single-breasted Fairbanks suit costing $620. His shirt and silk print tie come from his store.

GARY CASKEY/staff photographer

Carlene Lindsey of Detroit sports a $22 sweater vest from Winkelman's.