

Menswear elemental

son feel good. Clothing should be perceived as a part of a person's identity, and it must be capable of helping him or her meet everyday challenges with assurance.

This year the preferred identity is individual, a personal statement that contains elements of classicism, the contemporary and sometimes the revolutionary. Whether the silhouette is oversize or understated we'll see styles that are accented by attention-getting detail, then accessorized with the great accessory. Dismiss the old chibboleth that what's suitable for country won't do for the city.

His will be a look that transmits virile elegance. Hers will take the menswear look in exceptional and feminine new directions in soft tailoring.

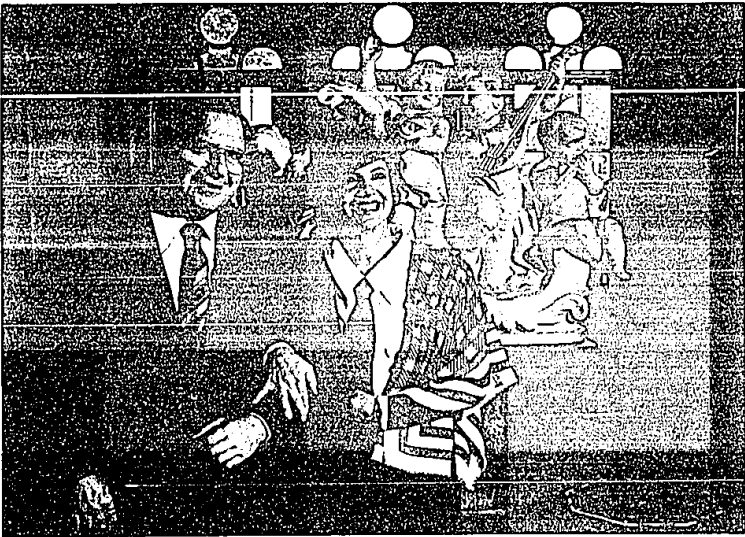

Both looks will communicate independence, self-assurance and confidence, to which we say, "Oh, boy!"

Turn up a collar and add an ascot for a menswear look.

For excitement, take a big, handwoven shawl and fling it across your black coat. The new flat, or small-heeled shoe, and textured legs will set off a favorite stand-by outfit.

This season, accessories are a must because they add the focus that is considered essential to the variety of looks that are distinguishing this from any other year.

Great accessories will add the lift dressing needs because they are the items that will get you the attention your appearance deserves.

Try accessories on singly or in pairings, then refine them to create a terrific appearance.

Without accessories pleats, knits, pants, suits, the great coats and grand occasion dressing will look merely OK, but they won't be the least bit sensational.
