

Roadsters keep hobbyists busy

Mueller is very meticulous about caring for his car and says that he cleans the front chrome grill with a toothbrush.

In fact, it was the unusual chrome grill which first attracted Mueller to the car.

"It took me a week to clean it up after the last time I had it out," he says.

Caring for the car as well as driving in it are a family affair, says Mueller.

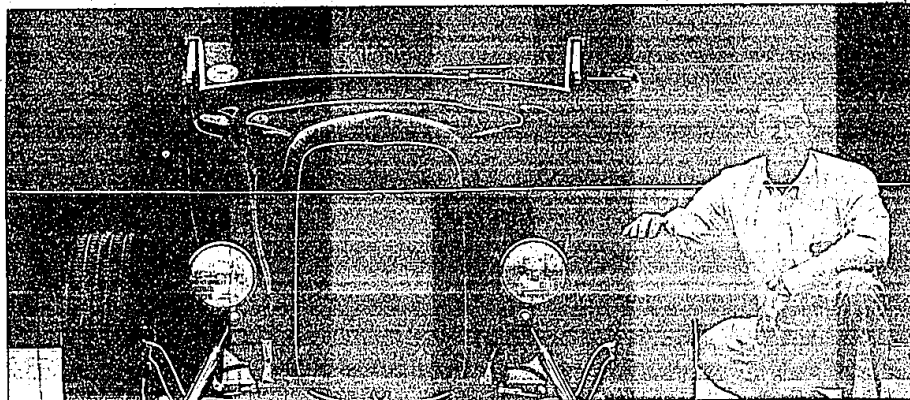

"My wife Pat and daughter Lisa like it too," he says. "I got her (Pat) interested in old cars and she attends shows with me."

Originally, Mueller planned to store his sedan in the Hamtramck warehouse that burned recently.

"It was a great place to store old cars because the wooden floors in the building absorb the humidity instead of the cars," Mueller explains.

Mueller became interested in historic cars while attending his first car show four years ago. He has about $27,000 invested in the car and plans to attend the Street Rod Nationals Northville weekend.

"I can't wait until the show starts," he says. "I've been looking forward to it for awhile now."

During his spare time Clark Kibler built this 1934 Ford roadster. The car was approximately two years in the making.

Over 35 roadsters have been built by Clark Kibler, an engineer for Mobil Oil Co.
