260 6th Graders Try Junior High

FARMINGTON To minimize the problems of transition, Farmington Junior High School this year initiated a new program of orientation for 260 sixth graders who will attend the school in the fall.

In groups of 30, the students have been attending classes at their new school, each in the company of a seventh-grade guide to show them the ropes.

STUDENT COUNCIL officers meet the newcomers and tell them about the organization of the council. They describe extra-curricular activities available in junior high.

Oliver Weeks of the counseling staff explains the counseling system.

Buhl Burton, administrative assistant, clarifies the scheduling process, and principal Alton Bennett extends a welcome from the staff.

DURING THE day, students view a film of a seventh grader's typical daily experience at Farmington Junior High.
