noticed that the watering in some individual containers was done by taking the bottom off a pop bottle, putting it upside down and inserting it in the mix.

This might sound rather fussy for us in a country of unlimited means. But for living quarters of limited space, it would provide a green garden for vegetables and flowers.

THOSE WHO live in the desert would welcome green vegetables, as well as patients who could plant these gardens and benefit from the accomplishments of personal gardening.

Needless to say, none of us could resist being in Washington, D.C. and seeing the town lighted up at night to form an exotic, beautiful picture. A visit to Washington, D.C. is a tonic for all of us.

Our "down to earth" theme commands me to suggest that you take steps to eradicate the weeds in your lawn by weed killer or your muscle—and don't forget to fertilize the lawn to assure a good crop of grass to fight "leaf kill" which comes in the autumn season.

Horticultural therapy meets growing need down to earth

Alice Burlingame

This exotic garden was developed by using special soil mixes in bags and round containers filled with a special mix which can be piled one on top of the other with a support to provide a pillar, an arch, fence, etc.

The round containers have squares about 4 inches by 8 inches which can be opened and planted.

The vegetables, as well as the planted flowers, were beautiful. The concept in any size or pattern would be exotic for an apartment building, patio splendor, or for vegetable growth.

This new concept of growing ornamental plants and food crops may go a long way in areas of congestion, display gardens and food-deprived countries.

In 1951, a new profession was spreading its wings at Clinton Valley Center, Pontiac. Over the years, the department of occupational therapy has sponsored the training of more than 150 persons.

Throughout the years, educational institutions, as well as hospitals, have developed the profession of horticultural therapy.

Gradually, the training in this profession spread to Canada and England. In August, your columnist and founder of the profession journeyed to Washington to attend the National Conference of Horticultural Therapy.

The meetings were held at the National 4-H Headquarters in Chevy Chase, Md. The campus (former private school of Chevy Chase) is comprised of buildings with beautiful Colonial architecture on wooded grounds. It was an ideal setting.

Those in attendance were from every conceivable type of health center. It was gratifying to see the Hospice organization represented.

A BETTER concept of the beauty of our environment strengthens all who develop this appreciation. It is a tonic in times of stress.

Naturally, being near the National Arboretum, brought a temptation to study the country garden which has the agricultural professions all about. The total concept has been developed to be used especially for limited grounds and the have-not countries.

I noticed that the watering in some individual containers was done by taking the bottom off a pop bottle, putting it upside down and inserting it in the mix.
