hockey

son of former Detroit Red Wings coach Bobby Kromm, has already scored seven goals this season for the Calgary Flames of the NHL.

Robert Moore and Gordie MacDougall, two of the MSHL's top scorers last summer, have signed minor league contracts with the AHL.

To further assist area players in playing pro hockey, Baker has established what he calls an "International Clearing House." The clearing house is designed to help European scouts locate American talent within the MSHL, and by the same measure, help those players interested in playing pro hockey in Europe.

Area standouts signed by European pro scout

By Chris McCoaky
staff writer

Success is measured in many ways. Some measure it in terms of dollars and cents. Some in terms of the experience gained. Others in terms of goal achievement.

The goal of the Midwest Summer Hockey League, which has housed itself in the Plymouth Cultural Center the past two summers, was to assist the development of area hockey players.

Its success is easily measured.

A.J. Baker, the MSHL's active commissioner, has a list of eight MSHL players playing professional hockey in Sweden and Austria, another is playing in the NHL and still two more in the AHL.

Sweden's super scout Elje Johansson spent a month scouting the MSHL this summer. As a result, he signed the following players to pro contracts: Rich Hutchinson of Plymouth, Paul Weber of Ann Arbor, George Baker of Redford, Mike Kasper of Bay City, Perry Reed of Ann Arbor and Dennis Smith of Livonia.

JEFF EISLEY, a standout at Michigan State University, is also playing in Sweden.

John Hutchinson of Minnesota, who played in the MSHL last summer, is playing in Austria.

Perhaps the best known MSHL player is Rich Kromm. Kromm, the
