Optometrists send message to VDT

"High technology is making new demands on us today, including demands on our vision as a result of the use of computer video display terminals (VDTs)," says the president of the Michigan Optometric Association.

In a Save Your Vision Week message, Dr. Joseph D. Chinder of the optometric organization said that the use of VDTs, whether in the office, bome or classroom has resulted in complaints piten stemming from visual distress.

"The most common causes of visual complaints by VDT users often are brought about by the aggravation of air ready catising vision problems which ready catising vision problems which involved the production of the visual distress. The most common causes of visual complaints in vision problems which we have been complainted to the visual visional institute of Occupational Safety and Health and the Michigan Optometric Association recommend thorough yeach year, for VDT users," Cainder said.

doctor of optometry should be advised that the patient is a VDT user and about any specific symptoms the pa-tient is experiencing. It is also import-ant to mention the specific distance and angle of the VDT screen.

Optometrists offer some suggestions or making VDT use more comfortable. for making VIT use more comfortable. They suggest that reference materials be placed as close to the VIT acreen as possible to avoid frequent large eye and head movements; that VITs be placed to avoid glare from windows, overhead lights and other sources; that operators take periodic eye rest breaks and that lighting be adjusted to levels lower than that customarily used in offices.

"Complaints resulting from visual stress of VDT operators generally can be eliminated or significantly reduced when professional optometric care and workplace environmental controls are sought," Czinder said.
