All's not well for OU star

By C.J. Risaak
staff writer

Brenda McLean's basketball career at Oakland University traveled in two directions. Each year she got a little wiser, a little better.

But each year, OU's team steadily slipped.

It has left McLean with mixed feelings about her career at OU, where she accomplished about as much as is humanly possible both on and off the basketball court. The 6-foot-1 senior forward was chosen to the All-Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (GLIAC) team 4 straight years.

This season she was also named to the GLIAC's All-Academic team and All-Defensive squad.

AND YET IT hasn't been all primrose for McLean. The Pioneers were 27-5 when McLean was a freshman and 23-4 during her sophomore season, winning GLIAC titles each year and earning NCAA Division II playoff berths.

That was with Dewayne Jones as coach. Jones left in 1983 and took the coaching job at University of Detroit. Sue Kruszewski replaced him. In 1983-84, Kruszewski's first season and with McLean the only returning starter, the Pioneers fell to 15-11 overall and finished second in the GLIAC. This year they dropped further, falling to 14-14 and tying for third in the GLIAC.

"I felt we had a better team this year than last year, when we finished second," said McLean. "We had some conflicts, we lost some games we shouldn't have, especially those two games up north (to Lake Superior and Michigan Tech). And I know we could have beaten (third-place finisher) Grand Valley."

"The team this year was better talent-wise, but we didn't win."

THE TEAM'S dismal performance cast a shadow on what was otherwise a sparkling career. McLean is one of only four Pioneers to surpass 1,000 in both points and rebounds. She ranks third on the all-time OU scoring list and is fourth among rebounders. McLean finished second in the GLIAC in rebounding (9.0) and seventh in scoring (14.5) this season.

And yet she felt her season should have been more productive. "I really wanted to score more," she said, adding, "But I didn't get the ball sometimes."

OU's biggest problem was at point guard. The Pioneers started five underclassmen last season, but lost three. Guards Kim McCarthy and Maria Reynolds had run-ins with Kruszewski, McCarthy transferring and Reynolds leaving the team before the first game.

That made things difficult for the Pioneers, whose weakness at guard was clearly evident by their failure to get the ball inside to power players McLean and Kim Nash. McLean averaged 16 points and 10 rebounds a game as a junior, both figures better than her senior season's stats.

"There was a lot of conflict between the coach and some of the other players," said McLean. "I got along with her OK. But the team wasn't really as together as it should have been."

THE PLAYER defections, combined with discipline problems, all had an adverse effect on the team, said McLean. Several team members grumbled when a player missed practice during Christmas break and was not penalized.

By midseason, there were players who, according to McLean, "were just playing, they didn't care if we won or not."

And that, perhaps more than anything, bothered McLean.

"I'm always out there to win," she said.

McLean made no secret that she enjoyed playing under Jones better, partly because the team won more. But McLean also had a hard time accepting Kruszewski as coach.

"I think one of the problems is that there's a big gap between her and the players," said McLean. "With coach Jones, you could joke with him, talk to him. No one really does that with her, just talks to her."

McLean admitted that even with Jones as coach, "I don't think we could've won the league. Saginaw Valley was too good. But I don't think we would have had as bad a won-lost record."

"I guess you could say it was a change for the worse."

WET McLEAN stuck with it, playing despite painful injuries. She twisted her ankle early in the season and hurt her Achilles tendon. Because of the tendon injury, McLean could not tape her ankle.

"I said, 'I'll just play almost every game,'" she said. "She also had a sprained finger that required taping each game."

And as a senior and the team's top scorer, McLean felt pressure every game to put points on the board. "Coach (Kruszewski) told me not to think about it, but I couldn't help it," she said.

Still, McLean added in retrospect, "I don't know if I'd change anything (about my career). I had a lot of fun. It would have been nice if we'd had the success the last two years that we did the first two."

For OU, McLean said, "(Kruszewski) said last year was a rebuilding year, and after we lost three players she said this year was a rebuilding year. Now, with Kim (Nash) and I graduating, she's saying next year will be a rebuilding year, so I don't know."

For herself, McLean said she'll earn her degree in cytology (the study of cells) next fall, with hopes of returning to her hometown of Marysville and finding work in research at a local hospital.

And the memories, though not all pleasant, will remain precious.

eighth in the 800 free relay (6:54.85) and Cooper, Koleber, VanderMyer and Larson placed eighth in the 400 free relay (3:08.37).

"WE GOT good swims from everyone," said Howland. "The only thing was that we didn't swim as well in the finals at night. The kids were disappointed about that, and so was I."

"But they're young, and we told them going in they've got to swim well in the morning to reach the finals. We geared them for the morning (preliminaries)."

"Honestly, I didn't think we had enough to score in the top eight as much as we did. So we put all our marbles in one bag and told them to go for it in the morning."

Lack of divers also cost OU. "All the teams that finished ahead of us had divers, so that really hurt us," said Howland.

Such a strong meet by a young team has left Howland predictably optimistic. He is already recruiting several divers, and hopes to have both McCloskey and Colton back next season. There is still a chance that Doug Clelland, who, after a strong career at Rochester Adams went to Tennessee, then quit swimming and enrolled at OU, will join the Pioneers.
