Mrs. Moore recalled one evening when she returned home to find her son judg in the street. His physical therapist was on hand and explained that Brian had fallen and simply had to learn to get up on bits own.

"THAT bid crawled on his hands and knees up a gravel driveway, into the house, with his knees bloody, and got into a chair," she said with tears in her eves.

"THAT kild crawled on his hands and from the program at Churchill thecar to get upon his own. I meet a parqued driveway, into the house, with his knees bloody, and got not a chair," she said with tears in her yes.

Today, Moore still works hard at his ohysical therapy and in recent weeks as moved out of his family's home in Livonia, where he lived with his mucher and two sisters, and into an independent living apartment, operated by Total Therapy Management, in Lin-ioln Park.

If is a roady and cager public into a chair," she said with tears in her eyes.

Today, Moore still works hard at his physical therapy and in recent weeks has moved out of his family's home in Livonia, where he lived with his mother and two sisters, and into an independent living apartment, operated by Total Therapy Management, in Lincoln Park.

He is a ready and easer public speaker, said his mother, who added that he often speaks before teen groups in area high schools. Last year he com-pleted the high school education that was interrupted by the car crash by re-ceiving a General Equivalency Diplo-ma from the program at Churchill High
