

Compromise hammered out for Metroview paving

A barricade now stands at the end of Green Hill Road where it connects with Metroview. The paving of Metroview and its connection to Green Hill Road has been the subject of debate at several recent Farmington Hills City Council meetings. Council members voted Monday to proceed with paving plans. A cost hearing has been scheduled for May 28.

A settlement was reached Monday on the proposed paving of Metroview Road, which has been the center of controversy at several Farmington Hills City Council meetings in recent months.

Council members voted unanimously at their Monday meeting to proceed with plans to pave Metroview from Eight Mile Road to its northern end. Metroview is in the city's southwest corner.

A date for the cost hearing was set for May 28. The estimated cost for the paving project is $180,600.

"The question the council has faced for several months is the actual physical connection of the road," City Manager William Costlek said at Monday's meeting. A barricade stands at the end of Green Hill Road where it connects with Metroview.

Some residents feared removal of the barricade would cause an increase in traffic and ruin the relative solitude they have enjoyed.

Following the April 15 council meeting, city staffers met twice with area residents and with John Uznis, developer of the Green Hill Apartments.

THE PLAN worked out includes the following provisions:

- The roadway would be located no further west than it is now.
- Uznis' participation would be up to $60,000, to be distributed as follows: $5,000 for landscaping on the west side of Metroview; $31,208.59 for Uznis' normal share of the local road cost; and $23,791.41, to be paid to the city to participate in the residents' assessment, with the exception of the nearby sod farm property.
- The local road unit assessment would be $2,400.66. The effective cost to the residents' unit assessment, in accordance with the above, would be $861.76.
- The city would move forward immediately with the goal of completing the project during the 1985 construction season.
- The city will work individually with the property owners at the north end of Metroview, to determine the design of the dead end.
- The homes directly across from Green Hill will be seen from headlights with a plan to be worked out before the cost hearing.

Weekend College is explained

Juggling career and family responsibilities often leave little time to complete a college degree. Mercy College of Detroit's Weekend College offers a solution.

The program will be explained during two Open House Information Sessions at the College's Conference Center 5-8 p.m. Thursday, June 6 and from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, June 8.

Information will be available on how the Weekend College works, admission requirements, financial aid, tuition reimbursement, career planning and degree programs. The Weekend College offers degrees in Business Administration, Public Administration, Health Care Administration and Planning, Health Services, Medical Record Science and Legal Assistant/Legal Administration.

Weekend College classes meet on Saturdays five times in a semester, with two Saturdays between each session. Classroom work is supplemented with directed study assignments which enable students to cover the same course content and meet the same academic standards as their counterparts in traditional college programs. Classes meet during three semesters of the academic year — fall, winter and summer.

WEC students have access to Mercy's modern library and extensive media resources. They are able to transfer credits from previous college courses and to receive academic credit for pertinent professional experience. In addition, they are eligible for financial aid.

To ensure processing of applications for the fall semester, new students should complete the application procedures as soon as possible.

For more information on the Weekend College Open House Information Sessions, call the Mercy College Admissions Office at 592-6930.

Mercy College is at 8200 W. Outer Drive corner of the Southfield Freeway in northwest Detroit.
