Arsenic and Old Lace

by Joseph Kesselring

June 6-9 & June 13-16

The classic comedy revolves around the zany events involving two charming and innocent old ladies, the Brewster sisters, and the antics of their two eccentric brothers. There is scarcely a moment that is not hilarious as these elderly ladies go about their charitable duties of offering "laced" elderly wine to lonely old men with the grace and innocent pleasure of hosting a church tea. "Arsenic And Old Lace" nimbly combines the humour of farce with the mystery and suspense of macabre.
Swift, satirical, exciting and full of chuckles. "Arsenic And Old Lace" is a play you will never forget.

Agnes of God

by John Pielmeier

June 27-30 & July 4-7

This outstanding Broadway hit and Best Play of 1982, "Agnes of God" is a riveting and powerful mystery dealing with a young, naive nun accused of mysteriously bearing an infant and then allegedly murdering it. The question of her guilt or innocence is overshadowed by an appeal to determine her sanity or her sanity. The court-appointed psychiatrist, the protective Mother Superior and Sister Agnes who seems oblivious to the birth-and to the crime, re-examine the meanings of faith, conscience and love.

Chekhov in Yalta

by John Driver & Jeffrey Haddow

July 18-21 & July 25-28

Cited by American Theatre Critics as an outstanding new play of 1981, "Chekhov in Yalta" is a light-hearted account of the meeting of Anton Chekhov and members of the Moscow Art Theatre. The play ironically mixes fact and fiction as Stanislavski and his acting company invade Chekhov's villa in Yalta for a few fun-filled days. The actors are in pursuit of Chekhov's new play, "The Three Sisters", and Anton is in pursuit of the leading lady. The love affairs, intrigue, and humour make "Chekhov in Yalta" an entertaining parody of Chekhovian comedies.
