Former patient nabbed in shooting

By Teri Banes
staff writer

A former mental patient wanted by Livonia Police for shooting at a nurse on Seven Mile three weeks ago was arrested after he reportedly shot a Detroit police officer last weekend.

Marcellus Wilkins, 30, was arraigned

Wednesday in Detroit's 36th District Court on charges stemming from the latest incident, including assault with intent to commit murder, car theft, receiving and concealing stolen property and use of a firearm while in the commission of a felony.

Livonia Police are expected to arraign him on charges here sometime Friday. In Livonia, Wilkins has been charged with assault with intent to commit murder and use of a firearm while in the commission of a felony in connection with the Seven Mile incident.

Wilkins was apprehended by Detroit Police Saturday night after he drove through a red light on East Outer Drive and crashed into another car, said Sgt. Gerald Tibaldi of the Detroit Homicide Division.

POLICE said Wilkins had driven through several red lights in a police chase that started about one mile away in the Hubbell-Grand River intersection.

There, Detroit patrol Sgt. Phillip Ferency, 28, had spotted Wilkins in a white 1984 Pontiac Fiero that did not have a key in the ignition. The newer car drove away and shots were fired, two of which hit the officer's windshield and one grazed him in the head. He was treated and released from the hospital the next day.
