

Leader notes a generation lost

N. Ball, of Canton, said he was good friends with G.K. Subramaniam of Ypsilanti Township, who is suspected to be dead along with his wife, Jaya, son, Murall Krishnan and daughter Sumita.

"I went to school with him in India, and we've known them for 25 years," Ball said. "They had a 3-year-old girl whom nobody had seen back home, and they wanted to take the baby and show her to everyone.

"They hadn't been to India in three or four years." A prayer meeting was planned for the family in Ypsilanti, Ball said.

Ball, who said he is active in many Indian organizations, expected the groups to make public statements about the crash.

"We'd like to try to gather the community together to express sorrow about what happened," Ball said, "and also express that senseless violence like this doesn't belong anywhere. We want to have our feelings known to everybody."

Hamesh Sharma, a member of the Bharatiya Temple in Troy, said he also was unable to comment on airport security or possible causes for the crash.

"There were 329 passengers, but each and every life that has been lost we feel sorry, very sorry (about)," Sharma said.

"This is so very tragic . . . with so many innocent bystanders lost. We express our sympathy to the families of all those who were on the plane."

Officials continue crash investigation lies were en route to Ireland early this week despite requests from Irish officials that they wait until autopsies were completed.

Cork residents are opening their homes to victims' families, because hotels are reaching capacity, Lyons said. Irish customs officials are waiving visa and passport requirements.

As of early Wednesday, no identifications had been made of the bodies, mostly female. Autopsies were being done at the rate of about four per hour, Lyons said.

"SIXTY HAVE been done so far. Some of the bodies were damaged from the impact of hitting the water, but not too badly. Most were in one piece," he said.

A Detroit-based Air-India spokesman said passengers' bodies retrieved from the sea were almost stripped bare, their clothes shredded by the 31,000-foot fall.

Because of that, and "because the aircraft broke up in flight, we feel certain it was an explosive device that caused the crash," he said. "We have no conclusive proof; this is based on visual observation."

MAHENDRASINHJI Chudasama, public relations manager for Air-India in New York, said three extremist groups claim to have planted a bomb aboard the jumbo jet.

The airline is making no further statements regarding the crash — or a fatal explosion Sunday in Japan's Narita Airport that may be linked to the crash — pending an investigation.

UNDERTAKERS in Canada are assisting in the identification effort, adding Chudasama. "They're helping relatives, supplying information needed to help authorities in Ireland identify the bodies," he said. "Dental charts, X-rays and medical records are being used."

No bodies were found Tuesday, Lyons said, and the 193 unaccounted-for bodies have either sunk or washed away.

"We expect no bodies will surface for nine or 10 days," said Lyons.

The Irish Navy and others still are searching for the plane's black box, which contains cockpit communication taped just prior to the crash.

"THEIR HOPE is that it is still floating. If it sank with the wreckage, it could be buried a mile deep," said Lyons.

Two hundred seventy-nine of the passengers were Canadian residents. Of the estimated 28 U.S. victims, 21 were from six families in southeastern Michigan communities including Sterling Heights, Ypsilanti Township and Ann Arbor. Eighty-six of the passengers were younger than 12.

Air-India has discontinued flights to and from Canada because it now is a plane short, Chudasama said. Passengers boarding fully booked Air-India flights from New York this week are being asked to check in three hours early, as all checked baggage is being X-rayed and identified by passengers before boarding.

Community gathers

and Krikhita Laurence, two Toronto sisters, who were on the flight.

"They lose their lives over somebody else's problems. It's not fair. I'm not angry. I just miss them," she said between sobs. "It makes me wonder whether everything we're doing now is really important. Why plan your future if it's not going to exist?"

"I just can't figure it out. They haven't pulled out all of the bodies yet, so I keep thinking there's still some chance."

The best things don't change — but in July they're 20% off.
