TAKING GOLD BY TABLETS
Traditionally taking gold therapy in rheumatoid arthritis required an injection at regular intervals; now there is a gold tablet that can substitute for injections.
Both forms can cause decrease production of red and white cells and platelets, and possibly damage the kidneys; these complications are less likely with gold tablets than with injectable gold. However, the tablet form can cause diarrhea or stomach cramps, a problem that rarely occurs with injectable gold.
Initiating injectable gold requires a weekly visit to the doctor's office; though once the gold is injected, it's absorption into the body is assured. The tablet form necessitates a physician's visit only once a month; but the medication must be taken twice a day. Forgetting a dose means a corresponding loss of gold's effect.
At present, my preference is to begin with injectable gold. Patients starting gold have active arthritis and need close follow-up; coming in weekly is in their interest. Usually they are taking several medications, and the injection relieves the need to schedule yet another drug. When their arthritis is controlled, they can transfer to gold tablets.

with the Rev. Edward King officiating. Memorials may be made to the American Cancer Association or the Michigan Heart Association.
